Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Sunday 14 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Becoming milder than of late, but often wet and windy.

This Evening and Tonight:
Windy with severe gales in far north-west, whilst rain, some heavy, continues to move eastwards. Clearer conditions follow across central and northern areas, but low cloud and mist possible as rain clears. Possible frost and ice in north-east Scotland.

Monday:
Rain in south-east clearing, whilst low cloud lifts to leave sunny spells. Some showers in the west, heavy in north-west at first. Much milder than of late.

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Changeable with bands of rain and showers followed by brief settled spells, moving in on a brisk southwesterly wind. Coastal gales in the west, especially northwest, at times. Rather mild.
